

SIX COMMON TYPES OF PLAGIARISM

1. COPY & PASTE

This type of plagiarism occurs when you copy information word-for-word from a source and paste it into your own work without using quotation marks and proper citation.

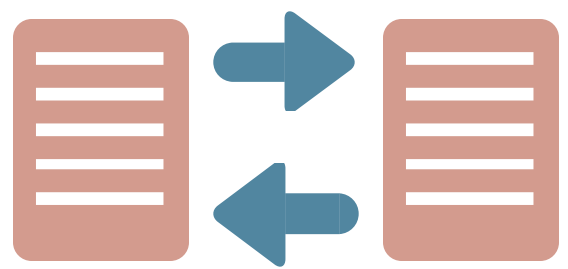

2. FIND & REPLACE

This type of plagiarism occurs when you only change a few words from the original source.

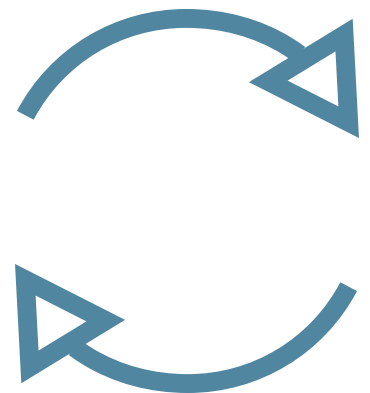

3. SHARING WORK (COLLUSION)

This type of plagiarism occurs when you share your work with other students and they pass it off as their own, or when others share their work with you and you pass it off as your own.

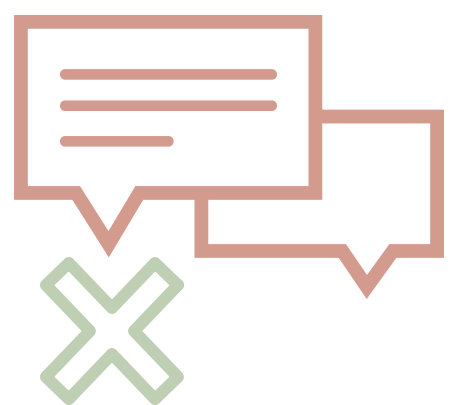

4. SELF-PLAGIARISM

This type of plagiarism occurs when you re-use work from previous courses, without getting permission from your current instructor first.

5. IMPROPER CITING

This type of plagiarism occurs when you fail to include in-text citations or an accurate reference list, don't cite secondary sources properly, or don't give credit to the correct author.

6. PURCHASING

This type of plagiarism occurs when you purchase sections or entire essays and submit them as your own work.
